Gator Report

DAY 1: A larj groop of cheeldren has come to my swamp. They hav stranj naems, laik "Jacy Eller" and say stranj words laik "loodi" and "slashur." They also swim, laik senseebal gators, but they hav weerd dri and cauld swamp with no plants. I wil eenvestigator mor.

DAY 2: I hav deevaized a clever disgaiz of a yelo wig and crocs. I hav seen the smal ones get in troubl without the loos red colar, so I hav takin the colar of a child for myself. But I do not hav a nek. I wil go to the "loodi" and the "contest seshuns" and I wil see how theez stranj aneemals hunt and train. The swamp wil not be taken. EDIT: I cannot hold a penceel.

DAY 3: The cheeldren. They run. So so far.

I hav blended in seemleslee

And my legs. They are so so short. I feer a mor careful atak is need-ed. We wil eenfilchrate. We cannot beet them with force. I hav convinced "Essy Eller" that I am just a late child. She suspekts nothing.

DAY 4: The older ones hav becom wize to my identitee. Som are feerful, others aksept me as supeereeor. I hav broht frends to help. These cheeldren, we wil not mayk them leev. We wil mayk them serv.

DAY 5: So much suk-sess. So much progres. The cheeldren, they reed my reeport now. And they do not kno that the one siting nekst to them is a gator. And thayr tee-chur: a gator. Soon they will look within themselves and find that they are a gator all along.

That's Entertainment! Recap

The first in-person That's Entertainment! in three years ran smoother than an alligator's scales, despite initial confusion on the hosts' parts. Our indispensable SCL hosts were Vincent Bianca (LA), seen wearing PJ pants; Amanda Roessler (WI), seen spreading lies; and Thelo Lewis (TX), seen being bald. They led us through a snazzy collection of music and dance performances with a few stitch-inducing skits sprinkled in.

Karen Dong (MA) claimed first with her wonderfully sung and hand-drawn "Welcome to Carthage" parody song. Anand Advani (VA) took second with his exciting poi routine to "I Ain't Worried" by OneRepublic, a song so good I cannot stop listening it to on repeat. Anvesha Guru (WI) nabbed third with her beautiful Bollywood dance. Stage crew was rumored to be dancing backstage. All of the acts did a wonderful job, contributing to an exemplary That's Entertainment!, and should be applauded for their skill and dedication to performance.

In a mere 25 hours, the NJCL Officers produced a hilarious skit pulling back the curtain on the reality of your fearful leaders—though we here at The Ear all hope that Savvy is ok after that incident with the floating and whatnot. In the future, the NJCL officers will know to call the brand new SCL Crisis Line for help with their 25-year-old Vecna problems.

Finally, please be welcoming and say "Hi" to any SCAlligators you might see around campus past sunset. We can report that Vincent is totally fine and has not been brainwashed to accept Sinclair Franz (FL) and our alligator overlords. And remember: DO NOT FEED THE SCLERS!!

Jon Gumz (CA) Cast in Brown Squirrel: The Movie

Inspired by the return of the cheer Brown Squirrel after a three-year hiatus, SCL Hallmark quickly expanded to buy the SyFy channel, now rebranded as SCLy-Fy, and greenlit an adaptation of Cronenberg's The Fly.

When ScientistL Jonathan Gomez (played by Jon Gumz) completes his teleportation device, he decides to test its abilities on himself. Unbeknownst to him, a brown squirrel slips in during the process, leading to a merger of man and rodent. Initially, Gomez appears to have undergone a successful teleportation, but the squirrel's cells begin to take over his body. As he increasingly wrinkles up his little nose, Gomez' California SCL friends are horrified as the person they once loved deteriorates into a monster.

Gumz was cast after winning a bushy tail shaking competition open exclusively to those who entered the NSCL Raffle. It'll be released as a double feature with Singin' in the Swamp next summer.

Cajun Queen

You are da Cajun Queen
 Da sweet tea, see the Cypress trees
 Cajun Queen
 Feel da heat, da humidity, eauxh yeah
 You can dance, you can swing
 Wearing your Mardi Gras bling
 Ooh, see dat girl, watch dat scene
 Diggin' the Cajun Queen

Inspired by the NJCL Choral Presentation yesterday, LJCLers proposed an amendment to the state constitution to make Cajun Queen by BAAB the new Louisiana national anthem.

Scarlet and Violet Starter Pokemon Spotted Around ULL Campus

Nintendo and Game Freak have announced a collaboration with NJCL to promote the upcoming Pokemon Scarlet and Pokemon Violet games. In a groundbreaking act of marketing, delegates may glimpse three new starter pokemon amongst the iconic campus wildlife. "The overlap between the games and the current convention are clear" remarked Phil Dilinger. "The University of Louisiana at Lafayette campus has the perfect ecosystem for all three Pokemon, and we're excited to teach kids about Latin roots through video games!"

Look for the grass type Sprigatito (Feles memeticus) in the colony of campus cats, the fire type Fuecoco (Alligator gooficus) basking alongside the Cypress Lake alligators, and the water type Quaxly (Anaticula josukeformis) among the flocks of ducks. At press time, neither Game Freak nor NJCL had any comment about alleged hordes of Trubbish living around Thibodeaux Hall.

Voltron: Spirit Defender

A coalition of smaller states dethroned TSJCL as the convention spirit champions at General Assembly IV. For decades, the TSJCL has won convention spirit wars by being louder and, well, just bigger than most other states. The coalition combated Texas's might by forming "Defender of Spirit" Voltron, a 300-foot tall, extra-extra-large state comprised of six robots, piloted by delegates from Indiana, California, Ohio, Kentucky, New Jersey, and the UK. They used their combined power to overcome TSJCL's spirit.

Decades ago, during a particularly heated spirit contest where TSJCL attempted to raise their power level more than 9000, the St. Olaf's College auditorium imploded.

Susan Schearer separated Voltron lest a single state gain too much spirit power, bonded the robots' energies to Paul De's life force, and scattered them across the universe for the next generation of delegates to discover.

For the past eight years, UK JCLer Alistair Gordon Lethbridge-Stewart had been closely monitoring TSJCL's recent rise in power. Worried that they were yet again becoming too powerful, he convened the other states' delegates. They found Paul and began scouring the globe for the robots. By chance, they found them in the alligator habitat at the University of Louisiana, Lafayette. Under cover of the 69th NJCL convention, they reunited the robots to form...VOLTRON.

Coffee Stonks

The Lafayette economy has been booming the past week over what experts are calling “The NJCL Effect.” Drove of high school students from across the nation descended upon campus, and immediately started buying up pillows, bedding, utensils, and more coffee than anybody should ever consume. Economist Dr. Gary Gary Baker first noticed the trend when he saw JCLers selling out the entirety of the local campus coffee shop. “This level of economic stimulus is unprecedented,” said Baker. “If we could harness the power of JCLer spending across the world, then we frankly wouldn’t even need economists any more.” We tried to catch a JCLer to interview them about their effect on the economy, but they were all running around shouting increasingly incoherent memes and spirit cheers and could not be stopped for an interview. However, once the caffeine wears off in a few days, we will attempt to follow up with them. Long-term outcomes of “The NJCL Effect” are currently unknown, but we at The Ear feel qualified and caffeinated to say that everything will be fine.

Imposter Candidate Sighted

During the recent elections, many of the candidates have been seen campaigning directly to delegates, but an imposter candidate has appeared in a snazzy suit, campaigning for a fictitious position called Delegate Coordinator (DelCo). His website (see QR code above) contains many dubious claims: Latin being their first language, dominance in underground Certamen duels, and being the watercolor painter behind the master oil painting “Water Lilies.” Their natural charisma and charm ensnared many JCLers’ into endorsing their I.R.O.N. F.I.S.T. program, including the NJCL President, 1st VP, 2nd VP, and Editor, as well as every state JCL president. But beware of their charm, JCLers, because signing their steno pad constitutes a legally binding contract to do the Stanky Legg.

Rogue JCLer Fed to Campus Gators

On Tuesday afternoon, an unnamed JCLer was seen stealing food from the campus alligators. As we know, taunting the gators is expressly forbidden by the NJCL. The student was set to be sent home at their parents' expense, but the parents refused to buy their naughty child a ticket home, stating that if they broke the rules, they should figure out a way home. Around 9 p.m., unknown persons were seen walking the JCLer to the swamp next to the student union. When the group returned, the student was not with them. Convention Ear staff have discovered that the child was fed to the alligators, assumingly to send a message that rule breaking will not be tolerated. Stay safe out there, kids, and make sure not to taunt the gators.
